Do you agree or disagree with the following statement?

More and more people are spending money on their pets, even though there can be other good ways to spend money.

Sample answer:

It has been publically recognized that pet has increasingly became one of the most essential parts of modern people's life. Moreover, the relationship between human and domestic animals has its long history which could trace back to the prehistory period. Although populace's lifestyle has changed drastically in the recent centuries, the function of domestic animals or pets has not changed much, in which, they are human's friends and companion for all the time. With all aspects are carefully considered, I personally consent to the perspective that there are more and more people are spending money on their pet, even though there can be other good ways to spend money. My thesis could be circumstantiated by the following two reasons. First, spending money on pets could provide more chances to people. Second, spending money on pets could make their master healthier.

First of all, spending money on pets could offer more opportunities to other people. strangely but interestingly, the mass are tends to forget that the pets industry is also conducted by people, which means, the money which spend on pets would certainly current to people who work in this industry, by doing which, these investments on pets could create more opportunities to other people. For example, my father's friend Mr. Wang established a pet funeral hall few years ago. With the increasing recognition of the notion that pets are also family members, more and more people are willing to spend couple thousand dollars to form a funeral for their dead pets. As a result, Mr. Wang's little company expands and hires more employees, which number increase from less than ten people to fifty people in this year. Mr. Wang's example is not exceptional, for a statistical research which implemented by a pets industry magazine indicates that in the last three years, in China, the investment which people spend on their pets has improved 550 percent, which has created 1.5 million job position to the mass. Although this study is not conducted by an institute, it is still not hard to claim that more people are benefiting from the expanding pet industry. Thus, spending money on pet could offer more opportunities to the public.

Secondly, despite the chances which have been created by people's increasing investment, spending money on pets could also enhance their masters' health. It is not hard to imagine that by raising a pet such as a dog, the master need to spend more time to do sport with their pets, compared with the people without pets. As my personal experience, my parents brought a dog six years ago, which requires two walk a day, one in morning and one in evening. The time our family members spend is approximately one and half hour per-day to walk with the dog. AS a result, we do not suffered from any major disease since then. Strangely, by exercising with our pets, both my parents and I are healthier than we used to be. Another statistics research states that 67 percent of people who spend money and keep pets could live older than 80 years old. Moreover, only 38 percent of people who do not have pets could live older than 80 years old. This comparison declares that pets' master are tends to live longer, therefore healthier, than those who live solely. Accordingly, spending money on pets could also promote their masters' health.

As the content that I have aforementioned above, my thesis: there are more and more people who spend money on their pets are supported for two fine reasons, which are spending money on pets could provide more opportunities for the mass, and offer an better health condition for pets' master. Therefore, both two reasons are well-informed and supported by good examples. In the near future, it could be expected that the importance of pets would continue to increase, and being recognized by more people.
