

托福写作常见开头模板：引文式

“引文式” (Quotes)

(1) A well-known proverb goes that “where there is a will, there is a way.” by which is meant that one can find a way to success as long as he or she has a strong will. With a strong will, one can focus all his energy on one point, which makes his success possible. Without a strong will, however, one can be easily distracted from his goal or discouraged by setbacks, which leads to his ultimate failure.

(2) The saying “No pains, no gains” is almost universally accepted because of the plain yet philosophical moral it teaches: if one wants to achieve something, he has to work harder and tolerate more than others. The saying is true of any pursuit man seeks. Whatever one wishes to accomplish, he has to exert himself to forge ahead, for nobody can expect anything for nothing.

Similar Topics

It is Never to Late to Learn.

A Contended Mind is a Perpetual Feast.

When Little Things Count.

Rome was not Build in a day.

Honesty is the best policy.

A rolling stone gathers no mass.