(1) Some parents may believe that children should not be allowed to play computer games because it is a waste of time but I am against this way of thinking. Many computer games are designed to help children understand history, culture, and the world. By playing these educational games, children can learn useful knowledge and social skills. For example, there is a game called “The Voyage Age,” in which the player is asked to travel to some parts of the world, deal with a lot of different people and solve problems while learning about different cultures and history. The children who play this game gain a good foundation in world geography and learn about culture in different places. If children are given a certain amount of time to play the games they like in their spare time, they will certainly learn something useful in a relaxing way.
