S4 Elation Effect

When employees of a company or organization are given a higher rate of compensation or pay for their work, they may respond by doing higher quality work, or by working more quickly and accomplishing more work in the same amount of time. This is known as the elation effect. Some psychologists think the elation effect may occur as a result of positive emotions—feelings of joy or elation—that employees experience when their compensation or pay increases. The elation effect is temporary, however. Over time employees tend to return to previous levels of quality and speed.

S4 Environment impact assessment: to ensure decision makers consider the environmental impacts when deciding whether or not to proceed with a project.

A construction company was to build a shopping centre on a large land. Before the construction, they did a study and found the land was wetland. Their original plan was to fill solid soil into this land, but the environment impact assessment said the wetland was very important for the environment. It could prevent flooding coz it could hold water. So they decided not to fill the land and cancelled this plan. Alternatively, they moved to another piece of land.
